"The Ironic Spectator, therefore, is not only an eminent work of media studies scholarship that presents a detailed and inspiring analytical framework. Its theorization of post-humanitarianism and the aesthetic and sociopolitical questions posed by new media practices deserves to earn it a wide readership in all disciplines interested in contemporary popular culture and world politics."

The Ironic Spectator is perceptive and makes a weighty contribution to the academic literature on media, humanitarianism, and solidarity. Chouliaraki urgently calls on the West to stop looking at itself in the mirror and reconstitute itself as a global citizenry, responding to suffering in a cosmopolitan fashion.
